Three cutting affrays took place in the mining camp of Fierro, eighteen miles from Silver City, of which two may have fatal results.

The first occurred Thursday night, a Mexican by the name of Juan Almazan being the victim. The trouble was the result of a drinking bout in Almazan's tent and his assailant was another Mexican, Antonio Lopez. In the fight which took place Almazan was stabbed by a knife in the left side, the weapon having been driven into his body by Lopez with sufficient force to completely sever one of the ribs. The wounded man was reported yesterday morning as bleeding internally and very likely to die. Dr. Beecher, rendering medical attention, but does not expect to save his life. Lopez made his escape and has not been apprehended.

On Friday night a miner by the name of Alex. White was murdered and stabbed in the left kidney. While there is some question as to the identity of the man who cut him, it is believed that the man was a Mexican by the name of Francisco Sotelo. White was a well known miner and was reported to have been a member of the Iron Head mine.

The same evening Juan Matilda cut in the face of a man who followed a drunken row in which several were participants. He will recover. He is just recovering from another wound inflicted a short time ago.

MOQUI SNAKE DANCE.

The weird ceremony to take place tomorrow at Wolpi.

The reverend priests who figure out the date of the moon and the sun seem to have made a miscalculation this year. The dance was first announced for August 16, but later it was changed to the 23rd. Still, the ceremony is held annually at Wolpi and at Atrah, the latter the most important village of the half-breed, or more correctly, the Moqui (good people), as the Moqui prefer to be called. The dance at Wolpi, where it is held this year, is usually considered the most important and more interesting. At Atrah it is held on the mesa edge, circumscribed by the houses of the pueblo. At Wolpi there is no such restriction. A fact not generally known is that there is always more than one of the Moqui dances each year. There is at ways a dance at one of the less important pueblos, a dance which the public at large is not expected to attend, and which usually abounds in features unbecomingly and blood-curdling. This year it is believed that the Moqui superannuated dance will be given in the village of Shupavai. Two hundred whites or more will witness the Moqui dance and the Moqui of them will take in, as well, one or more of the Navajo "treats," the most important of which is given by the traders on the reservation. The Moqui are usually given by the traders on the reservation. The Moqui are usually given by the traders on the reservation.
